—Brian Doyle is the editor of Portland Magazine at the University of Portland – “the finest spiritual magazine in the United States,” says Annie Dillard. He is also the author of nine books of essays, nonfiction, and “proems,” and his work has appeared in The Best American Essays anthologies, The Atlantic Monthly, Harper’s, Orion, The American Scholar, and magazines and newspapers in Africa, Australia, Ireland, France, England, and New Zealand. His books have four times been finalists for the Oregon Book Award, and he received the 2008 American Academy of Arts and Letters Award in Literature, which still makes him snort with laughter. The very idea.

—John Daniel’s new book, The Far Corner: Northwestern Views on Land, Life, and Literature (Counterpoint, April 2009), is a collection of personal essays that explore various subjects in the human and more-than-human worlds, seeking to define his allegiances to his home places and region and the wholeness of life itself. Author of nine books of poetry, essays, and memoir, Daniel has won the Pacific Northwest Booksellers Award for Rogue River Journal, two Oregon Book Awards in Literary Nonfiction, and a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts. A former Wallace Stegner Fellow at Stanford University and James Thurber Writer-in-Residence at Ohio State University, Daniel lives with his wife, Marilyn Daniel, in the Coast Range foothills west of Eugene, Oregon.
