—Ron Talney was born in British Columbia but has lived most of his life in Oregon. He is an attorney retired from a private non-profit legal aid program that provides free legal representation to low-income clients. He has published four books of poems, The Anxious Ground, The Quietness that is our Name, A Secret Weeping of Stones, New and Selected Poems, and, most recently, The Broken World, as part of the William Stafford Chapbook Series and published by Stone City Press. He is also the editor and publisher of Stone City Press, Lake Oswego, Oregon

—Carl Reisman, who was born in Rochester, New York, has lived and worked in Memphis, New Orleans, Iowa City and Eugene, Oregon as well as in Illinois, where he attended the University of Illinois, completing both his undergraduate degree in economics and his law degree. He currently makes his home and works as a lawyer in Urbana, Illinois. He is the author of four collections of poetry, most recently Kettle (2005) and Home Geography (2008), a new chapbook just released from Stone City Press.
