

Mountain Writers Series

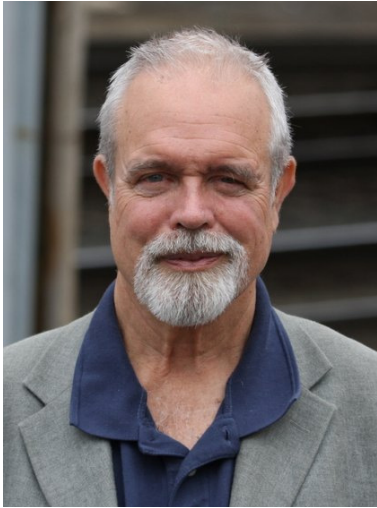

Image and Narrative
A Poetry Writing Workshop
with Joseph Millar

Saturday, July 20, 2013
10:00 AM– 4:30 PM

Multnomah Friends Meeting House
4312 S.E. Stark Street, Portland, OR

IMAGE AND NARRATIVE: In this generative workshop we will look closely at these two elements of the poem and consider their separate potentials and functions, the ways by which they augment each other, in our own work and the work of others. We'll look at a page from Pound's critical writing and use poems by Ruth Stone, Lucille Clifton, Theodore Roethke and Philip Levine as models for exercises. Bring a notebook and be ready to write.

—Joseph Millar is the author of three books of poetry: Blue Rust (Carnegie Mellon, 2012); Overtime (2001), a finalist for the Oregon Book Award; and Fortune (2007). Millar grew up in Pennsylvania and attended Johns Hopkins University. He spent 25 years in the San Francisco Bay area working at a variety of jobs, from telephone repairman to commercial fisherman. It would be two decades before he returned to poetry. His work has won fellowships from the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts, as well as a 2008 Pushcart Prize, and has appeared in DoubleTake, TriQuarterly, The Southern Review, APR, and Ploughshares. Millar teaches in Pacific University's MFA program and lives in North Carolina with his wife, the poet Dorianne Laux.
